One window to rule them all

The Firefox containers extension lets you organize tabs into categories for each of your online lives (personal, work, etc.) all in the same window. No more losing track of which email account is which or accidentally sharing your shopping cart in a meeting.

Here's where it goes global Mozilla VPN is now integrated into Firefox containers, meaning you can set each container tab to browse from a different country.

Why would you want to browse from another country?

It lets you see content shown only to locals, like news, sporting events, livestreams and more.

How might that look in your life?

Let's say you're traveling abroad, but want to shop like you're at home. You can open a "shopping" container and set it to browse from your home country.

3 quick steps to get international browsing:

1. Download Firefox Multi-Account Containers
2. Subscribe to Mozilla VPN
3. Open a new container tab under the File menu, then select the city you'd like to browse from
